Biennial Conference of the International Academy for Intercultural Research

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

July 23 - 27, 2023

Welcome to Temple University, and to the Klein College of Media and Communication!

Our Klein College mission statement reads:

Klein College of Media and Communication generates knowledge, engages with and for its communities, and educates students to be ethical, analytical and creative leaders in a multicultural society.

With this mission in mind, I am especially pleased to welcome the International Academy for Intercultural Research to our campus and to our city. Klein College's origins date back to 1927, when the Department of Journalism was founded at Temple. Ninety years later, in 2017, our was named the Lew Klein College of Media and Communication after Philadelphia television pioneer Lew Klein, who taught part-time here for more than 60 years, even while he was helping invent the television industry. Lew produced iconic programs, including "American Bandstand" and "Romper Room," designed the modern news format, and was the first to introduce weather reporting on the evening news. Along the way, he taught and mentored hundreds of Temple students who went on to successful careers in media and communication fields.

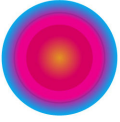

Klein College is one of the largest and most comprehensive of media and communication in the United States. It is home to four departments: Advertising and Public Relations, Communication and Social Influence, Journalism, and Media Studies and Production. We offer six undergraduate majors, four master's programs, and a doctoral degree.

Situated in the nation's fourth-largest media market, Klein College provides a wealth of academic and professional opportunities, delivered by an experienced and renowned faculty of researchers and practitioners. Students in Klein College have access to an abundance of resources that provide a blend of analytical and theoretical knowledge as well as hands-on experience within Philadelphia's dynamic urban environment.

I hope you are able to experience some of what Philadelphia has to offer while you are here. It's an exciting and accessible city that we are proud to be part of here at Temple. And the food! Try the cheesesteaks, sure, but be sure to explore our kaleidoscope of cuisines.

Again, our warm welcome. Best wishes for a wonderful conference.

Greetings from IAIR President: Adam Komisarof

It is my great pleasure to welcome you to The City of Brotherly Love, Philadelphia! Philly, as locals call it, is the first capital of the United States—replete with historic monuments, home of several of the world’s great art museums, and the birthplace of the Philadelphia Sound as well as such culinary delicacies as the tuna fish hoagie. Just one year ago, when IAIR welcomed its members to Rapperswil, Switzerland, we still faced great uncertainty due to the ongoing pandemic. My, how the world has changed. This year, without reservations, IAIR is ready to welcome you to Philadelphia—our first US-based conference in 6 years. I hope you will take this opportunity to enjoy building new collegial relationships, strengthening old ones, and engaging with many of the world’s most impactful researchers of intercultural relations.

Enjoy!

Adam Komisarof
Professor, Faculty of Letters
Keio University, Japan

Welcome to IAIR 2023!

Greetings from the incoming President: Saba Safdar

Dear Academy Members & Conference Delegates,
Welcome to Biennial Conference of the International Academy for Intercultural Research with the theme: Intercultural. Climate. Change. The theme of the conference reflects the broad range of research topics that members of the academy engage with. It also reflects the urgency and the relevance of these concepts in our world.

As I'm writing this message, Philadelphia and many major cities in the U.S. East Coast and Canada are suffering from what has been described as hazardous air quality due to wildfire in Quebec/Canada. Over 75 million people are warned to stay in and avoid all outdoor activities while heavy orange fume covers the sky in these cities. This is only one example of devastating impact of climate change on people's lives. This is also a reminder that we as scientists, researchers, practitioners, activists, and scholars have the responsibility to raise awareness on major issues that impact people's lives ranging from climate change and globalization to migration and human rights.

I hope the conference provides you with the opportunity to connect, engage, and learn from the vast knowledge that is being shared by our colleagues. I also hope to meet as many of you as possible during the five days of the conference. Please come and say hello.

With appreciation,

Saba Safdar
Psychology Professor
University of Guelph, Canada

Lifetime Achievement Award

Young Yun Kim

Young Yun Kim is Professor of Communication at the University of Oklahoma. Born and raised in Seoul, South Korea, Kim completed her Ph.D. degree (1976) in Communication from Northwestern University. She has since published 12 books and over 120 journal articles and book chapters. Among the leadership roles she has played in academic organizations are: Chair of the Intercultural Communication Division of the National Communication Association (NCA) and of the International Communication Association (ICA), and a founding Fellow and President (2013-15) of the International Academy for Intercultural Research (IAIR). Kim was named an ICA Fellow (2002) and is a recipient of the Top Scholar Award for Lifetime Achievement (2006) from the ICA. Kim's research efforts have produced two interdisciplinary theories: (a) the Integrative Communication Theory of Cross-Cultural Adaptation and (b) the Contextual Theory of Interethnic Communication. Each of these theories represents its target phenomenon as a multidimensional and multifaceted communication system, in which the individual (the "figure") and the surrounding environment (the "ground") are conjoined as a system of "organized complexity." Book-length versions of these theories are presented in Becoming Intercultural: An Integrative Theory of Communication (2001) and Crossing Ethnic Boundaries: The Contextual Theory of Interethnic Communication (in progress).

Early Career Award

Kinga Bierwiazzonek

As a social and cross-cultural psychologist, I conduct research on two primary themes: the psychological aspects of migration, acculturation, and cultural diversity, and the impact of conspiracy beliefs on individual behavior. I completed my double Ph.D. from Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, the Netherlands (2018), and ISCTE – University Institute of Lisbon, Portugal (2019). Currently, I work at the University of Oslo where I lead a large-scale project, funded by the Research Council of Norway, which provides a comprehensive perspective on immigrant well-being and social functioning using advanced meta-analytical techniques. My research is focused on understanding the interplay of individual, social, and cultural factors impacting cross-cultural adaptation in different groups of migrants, investigating outcomes such as socio-cultural functioning, psychological well-being, and somatic health. I also have a keen interest in research methods, especially meta-analysis.

The William B. Gudykunst Outstanding Book Award

Claude-Hélène Mayer

Claude-Hélène Mayer is a Professor in Industrial and Organisational Psychology at the Department of Industrial Psychology and People Management at the University of Johannesburg, South Africa. She is a Semester at Sea Alumni (SASFA22) and an IAIR Fellow and Board member. Further, she is an Associate Editor for Frontiers in Psychology (Positive Psychology) and for the International Journal of Cross-Cultural Management. She holds Doctoral degrees in Psychology, Management and Cultural Anthropology. Her Venia Legendi is in Psychology with focus on Work, Organisational and Cultural Psychology from the Europa Universität, Viadrina, Germany.

Claude's research areas all evolve around culture and include intercultural mental health and salutogenesis, intercultural conflict management and mediation, women in leadership in diverse contexts, shame and love across cultures, The Fourth Industrial Revolution, and psychobiography.

She lectures cross-cultural psychology, mental health, psychobiography, organizational theory, systems and design thinking, coaching, positive psychology, organizational behaviour and intercultural conflict management and mediation. Besides her academic work, Claude works as a licenced systemic family therapist and facilitator in family therapy, as well as a licensed hypnotherapist, coach, mediator and mediation facilitator in private practice. Since 2005 she also works as an international consultant and leadership coach in international business contexts.

Elisabeth Vanderheiden

Elisabeth Vanderheiden is an adult educator, theologian and intercultural mediator. She is CEO of the Global Institute for Transcultural Research and president of Catholic Adult Education in Germany.

Her publication activities focus on andragogical topics such as literacy, digitalisation, individual as well as societal change processes and transformative educational research. She has published numerous books on intercultural and transcultural topics.

Her most recent publications deal with shame as a resource - for example in the context of the 4th Industrial Revolution - but also in the relation to gender and age. Her special focus always includes culture and positive psychology. Current research projects deal with love in transcultural contexts, pedagogical love, life crises and humour, conflicts and Ikigai.

Rae and Dan Landis Dissertation Award

Wybren Nooitgedagt

Wybren Nooitgedagt is a postdoctoral researcher at Erasmus University in Rotterdam. After completing his bachelor's degree in Cultural Anthropology and Development Sociology (Leiden University), he obtained his research master's degree in Migration Ethnic Relations and Multiculturalism (Utrecht University) cum laude. In September 2017, he started working as a Ph.D. candidate at the European Research Centre on Migration and Ethnic Relations (Utrecht University), and the Interuniversity Center for Social Science Theory and Methodology under the supervision of Dr. Borja Martinović and Prof. dr. Maykel Verkuyten. In 2019 he was a visiting scholar for two months at the Society and Health Research Center of the Universidad Mayor in Chile under the supervision of Dr. Ana Figueiredo. His dissertation (Whose land is it?) is about perceived ownership and support for territorial compensation in settler societies. He examined three aspects of perceived territorial ownership: who is seen as the owner, why is that group seen as the owner, and what are the implications of perceived ownership? He currently works as a postdoctoral researcher with Dr. Jaco Dagevos, studying socioeconomic and sociocultural integration processes among Syrian refugees in the Netherlands.

Keynote Speaker

Dr. Emilia Zankina
Temple University Rome

Monday, July 24, 2023

in 2025

BRISBANE, AUSTRALIA

For the first ever joint biennial conference of International Academy for Intercultural Relations alongside the regional International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology

CONFERENCE

Participate in an exciting collaboration between IAIR and IACCP in 2025. We aim to bring people together from all around the globe and across disciplines for a connected and empowering experience celebrating all things intercultural and cross-cultural in the Sunshine State of Australia.

BRISBANE

Brisbane, capital of Queensland, is a vibrant, friendly city, with a laid-back outdoors culture. It is Australia's premier tourist region, connected to both the Sunshine Coast and the Gold Coast. There is something for everyone here.
